Often in winter you dare not open a window, even though the room be warm, because the cold air makes a draught that is dangerous. With a Perfection Oil Heater there need be no danger from draughts.

Open the lower part of the window a little, put the Perfection Oil Heater in front of it, and the cold draught will be turned into a pleasant, healthful current of fresh air. The

NEW YEAR'S DAY AT WHITE HOUSE

HOW PRESIDENT AND MRS. TAFT WILL RECEIVE.

First Cabinet, Then Diplomats, Judges, Officials and Army Men.

AFTER THAT THE CITIZENS.

Washington, Dec. 31.—President Taft will smile his New Year's greeting to the world Monday.

It will be the second time that the president and Mrs. Taft will officiate as host and hostess at that time-honored function, the White House New Year's reception. In defiance of the weather, crowds gather outside the white house hours before the buglers of the Marine band trumpet the entrance of the chief magistrate and the first lady of the land to commence the reception of the gilded diplomats, the judiciary, and the government officials, all of whom are received before the latch was lifted to the common people.

There is a character for every role in a world drama among the crowd that twirls in a persistent and stamping line from the white house doors down Pennsylvania avenue. Possessors of shiny elbows jostle bloods in fur-lined overcoats with familiar contemptuousness; matrons of determined physiognomy keep a hawk-like watch for advantageous places in the line. There are lean, there are fat, there are tall and there are small, in the thousands that come to shake the hand of President Taft and to wish him a Happy New Year.

With the first deep boom of the great hall clock at 11, four buglers step out from the band and sound the presidential call. The president and Mrs. Taft appear at the top of the broad winding stair and come down to receive the vice president and Mrs. Sherman, and the members of the cabinet and their wives. The party then move to the southern end of the blue room, where the president and vice president and the cabinet members form a receiving line and the ladies take up their places to the right of them. Then commences the reception of the diplomatic corps.

This is one of the most gorgeous spectacles that the national capital witnesses in the entire year. Bedecked and beribboned with the orders of their monarchs, in all splendor of their court costumes, the representatives of the foreign nations file past the president. It is a brilliant panoply of colors—of red and gold and blue, scintillating here and there with shining helmets of the Germans and the silks of the Oriental ambassadors and ministers.

The ambassadors are led by Baron Hengelmüller von Hongervar, the Austro-Hungarian ambassador, who, since the last New Year's reception has succeeded to the rank of dean of the diplomatic corps. Following him come the ambassadors arranged according to their seniority—those most recently accredited to the United States coming last in line.

The last ambassador in line is Marchese Cusani Confalonieri, the newly appointed Italian ambassador. Following him are the charges d'affaires of the Brazilian and Chilean embassies, the representatives of those countries having died in the past year, and no successors having as yet been sent by their governments.

After the ambassadors come the ministers, headed by Señor Don Joaquín Bernardo Calvo, the Costa Rican minister, who has been for years dean of the ministerial contingent. The last in this line is Mr. H. H. Bryn, minister from Norway, who was presented to the president only a few weeks ago. Each ambassador and minister is accompanied by his wife and the members of his suite.

Before the last diplomat had passed from sight the new chief justice of the United States, Edward Douglass White leads the associate justice of the supreme court into the receiving room. They are followed by other members of the judiciary, among them the judges of the new courts of commerce and customs appeals. Then the president shakes hands with the senators and representatives who remained in Washington during the holidays. There are only a few of them.

The congressional delegation mark the end of the first part of the reception. The buglers again step from their place with the band, and sound another spirited fanfare, as the doors open to the army, navy and marine corps officers—all in their full dress uniforms. Every military officer on duty in Washington is there and the gold lace of their uniforms is but little less gorgeous than the gilded dress of the diplomats.

With the passing of the military, the spectacular features of the reception are at an end, and the lesser government officials in plain citizens' clothes, file in, in the following order:

The Solicitor-General; Assistant Attorney-General; Assistant Secretaries of the Departments; Assistant Postmasters General; the Regents and Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution; The Civil Service Commissioners; the Interstate Commerce Commissioners; the Tariff Board; the Railroad Securities Commissioners; the Isthmian Canal Commissioners; the Commissioners of the District of Columbia; the Treasurer of the United States; Librarian of Congress; the Public Printer; the heads of bureaus in the several departments; the President of the Columbia Institution for the Deaf and Dumb.

Then follow the various patriotic societies, who are accorded special recognition at the New Year's Reception. Members of the following organizations are in line: The Society of the Cincinnati; the Aztec Club of 1647; the Associated Veterans of the War of 1812-17; the military order of the Loyal Legion of the United States; the Grand Army of the Republic; the Model of Honor Legion; the Union Veteran Legion; the United Veterans of the Union; the Society of the Army of Santiago; the Spanish War Veterans; the Army and Navy Union; the Minute Men; The Sons of the American Revolution; and the Oldest Inhabitants Association of the District of Columbia.

The last of the official visitors will have had left by one o'clock. Mrs. Taft, Mrs. Sherman, and the ladies of the cabinet, then withdrew from the reception line to the state dining room, where refreshments are served. In the blue room the president and his cabinet square their shoulders and prepare to receive the long line that for hours had been gathering along the white house walks. The president's smile broadens, the bugles sound, the band breaks into a lively two-step and the "common people" enter.

A heterogeneous throng—typically American—file into the lively music of the band, quickened to hurry them along. The line moves fast until it reaches the president, but there it is delayed by each individual endeavoring to obtain a distinctively personal greeting from the host.

A few feet down the line from the president stands several well-groomed and well-built men apparently lounging carelessly about, but keeping a careful eye on the moving line as it approaches the executive. They are the secret service men, and not a person reaches the objective point of the line without their close scrutiny. There are no hands wrapped in handkerchiefs, no packages are carried in the line, and no one approaches the president without keeping his two hands in plain sight.

The band quickens its tune, shifts from the lively two-step to more lively rag-time; the attendants are more persistent in keeping the line moving, but still the common people come on. Until the gray of dusk heralds the ending of the winter day they file through the blue room.

For the first time in many years a court has been discontinued in Crawford county, Pa., for want of a sufficient number of cases to make it worth while paying jurors.

WONDERFUL CURE OF SORE HANDS

Skin Peeled and Flesh Got Hard and Broke—Blood Flowed in Fifty Places—"Single Box of Cuticura Ended Suffering."

"About eleven years ago I was troubled with sore hands, so sore that when I would put them in water the pain would very nearly set me crazy, the skin would peel off and the flesh would get hard and break. There would be blood flowing from at least fifty places on each hand. Words could never tell the suffering I endured for three years. I tried everything that I was told to use for fully three years, but could get no relief. I tried at least eight different doctors, but none of them ever did me one cent's worth of good. I was discouraged and heartless. I would feel so bad mornings when I got up, to think I had to go to work and stand the pain for ten hours, and I often felt like giving up my position."

"Before I started to work mornings I would have to wrap every finger up separately, so as to try and keep them soft and then wear gloves over the rags to keep the grease from getting on my work. At night I would have to wear gloves in bed. In fact, I had to wear gloves all the time. After doctoring for three years, and spending much money, a single box of Cuticura Ointment ended all my sufferings. It's been eight years since I used any and I don't know what sore hands are now, and never lost a day's work while using Cuticura Ointment. Thomas A. Clapet, 310 N. Montgomery St., Trenton, N. J., Nov. 11, 1909."
